 Ancestry-Library Edition

Ancestry Library Edition has several different modules that you can see listed at the top. We will go through each and talk about the Search module last.

If you click on Message Boards, you can view the Message Boards that users post on through Ancestry.com. These are sometimes helpful in finding information on genealogy topics that others have already looked into. You cannot participate in the message boards, but you can view them.

Next, if you click on Learning Center, you can look at various Research Aids that Ancestry has prepared to help you get started in genealogy research.

This can be helpful to put your ancestors in context and also to learn how to track records on a local level.

In the next module, Charts and Forms, you can download and print forms to keep track of your research.

Charts and Forms

Download these charts and forms to organize your research.

Charts & Forms Census Forms

Ancestral Chart

An ancestor chart records the encestors from whom you directly descend-those for whom you intend to compile a complete and correct family unit. It shows at a glance the progress you have made towards this goal and what remains to be done.

Research Calendar

The research calendar gives an account of every record source you have searched and serves as a reminder of what you have already done and where you have found pertinent information.

Download Form

Research Extract

Use the research extract sheets to summerize information which cannot be photocopied, for which there is no document in your possession, or for things such as deeds which may be time-consuming or difficult to reread quickly when you need information from the copy you have.

Correspondence Record

Download Form

It is important to keep track of those with whom you have corresponded, the reasons for writing, and whether or not you have already received an answer.

Family Group Sheet

Each piece of information concerning a pedigree ancestor and his/her family is placed on a worksheet. Since the end result of your research efforts will be to compile complete. correct and connected families. the use of family group sheets from the beginning will make the compilation much easier.

Source Summary

It is helpful to be able to refer quickly to information you have found for a particular family and the sources of that information. Keep a separate source summery of information found for each family group.

If you click on Census Forms in the Charts and Forms section, you can view easy-to-read example Census forms from each year the Census has been conducted in the US, as well as some forms from the UK and Canada. This can be helpful in deciphering handwriting on old Census documents.

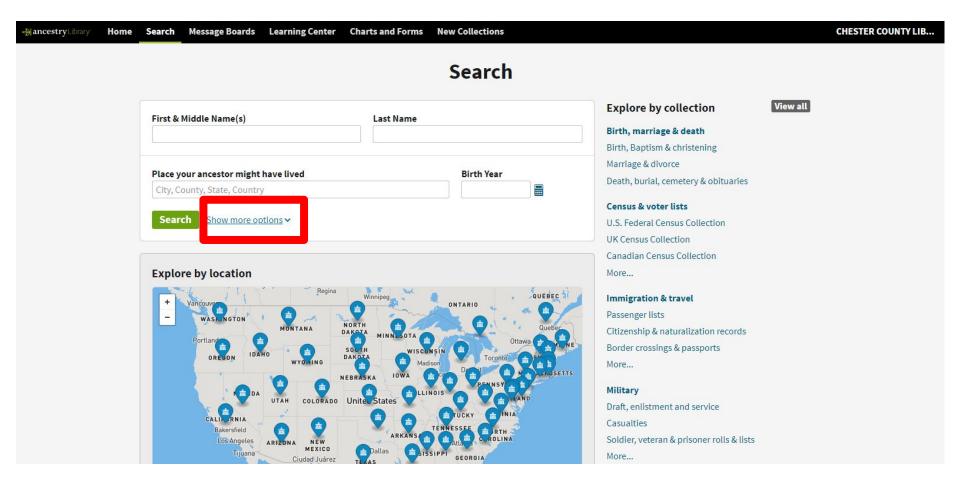

In the New Collections section, you can view what collections have recently been added to the Ancestry database. This is helpful if you search in Ancestry frequently, but find that there is a specific gap in the information that you need. You might see that a collection has been added that will be helpful to you.

If we click on the Search button, you can see several different options for search. I like to start with searching All Categories. You can limit your search further later if you find that you're getting too many results.

Once you are on the search page, click "Show More Options."

In this example search, I put in my grandfather's First, Middle, and Last name, the location where he was born in "Place Your Ancestor Might have Lived" and his Birth Year. I chose not to fill in more information because I am looking for his baptism record. Keep in mind what kind of information you are looking for while you search. If you want a marriage record, it would be appropriate to put in a spouse. If you want a birth record, you should leave that information out.

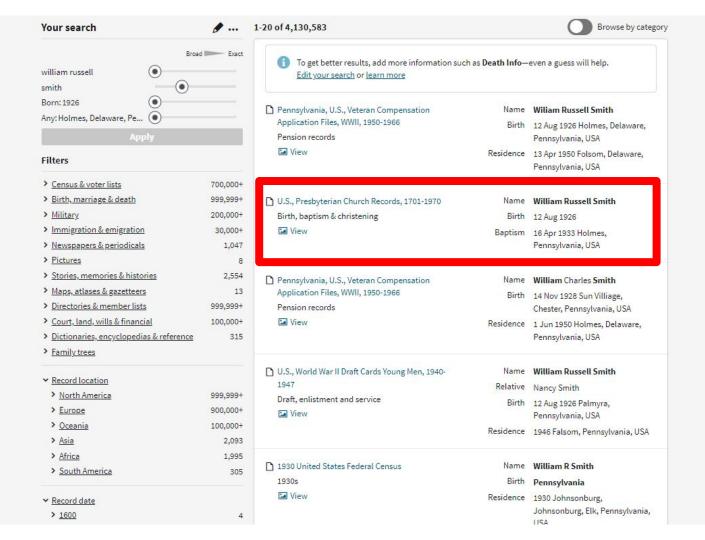

I also tend not to click "Exact" under my search terms. If you do this, the database will only return records that exactly match the characters you put in. As Mike discussed, there can sometimes be spelling errors in records, in which case you would not see those records if you clicked "Exact."

Here is the record I was looking for. You can hover over the link for the record to see a preview of it, or you can click on it to open it fully and view the image of the record if there is one.

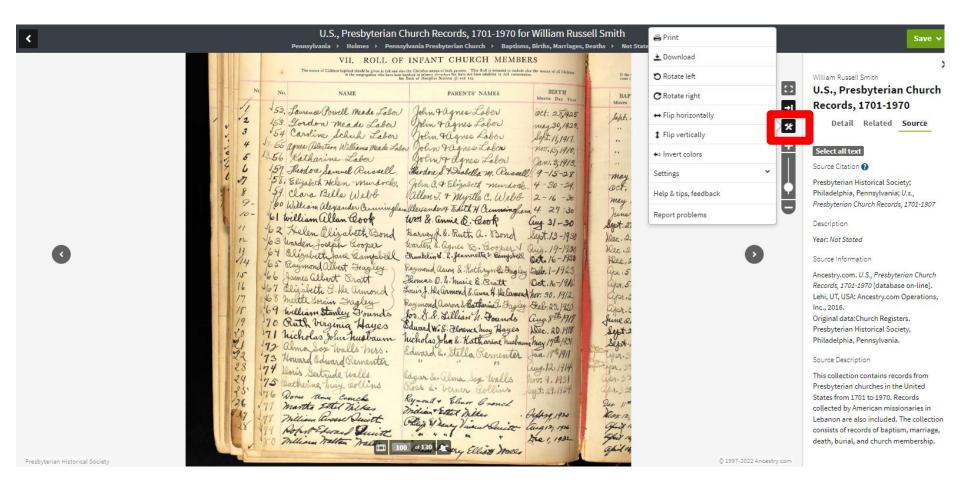

You can also use the Filters on the left side of the screen to limit your results if you are seeing too much that isn't relevant to you.

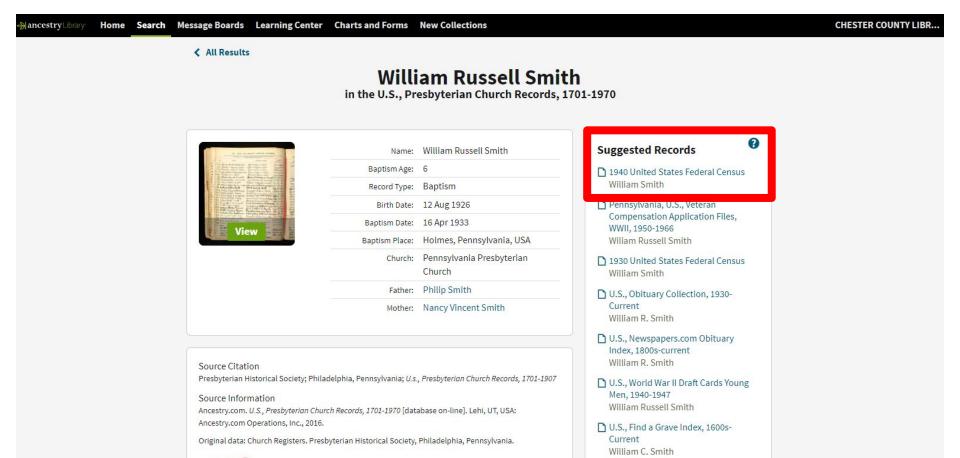

This is the transcribed record view. You can click the "View" button to see the image of the actual record that has been digitized.

From the image, you can print or download it to save for your records if you click the "Tool" icon.

You may also see some "Suggested Records" connected to the record you are looking at. These can be pretty accurate, so I recommend taking a look at them. The 1940 Federal Census that my grandfather was recorded in is connected to this record.

In this record, I get information on my grandfather's parents and his grandparents because they all lived in the house together when this Census was taken. I can click on the people listed at the bottom to view the record from their "perspective," which can also lead to me Suggested Records for those individuals.
